

The New York Times

Fashion & Style Scouting Report

By ALISON S. COHN

Published: February 27, 2013

Sophie at the Carlyle

Eloise absolutely loved the Plaza. But what about an aspiring Sophie? That would be the protagonist of Kelly Florio Kasouf's loosely autobiographical children's series, "The Super Adventures of Sophie and the City," about an Oscar de la Renta-wearing tyke who explores the Condé Nast Building among other city landmarks (the author is the daughter of the former Condé Nast chief executive Steven Florio). For her, the Carlyle is offering The Super Sophie Experience package to see Manhattan through the protagonist's eyes. Mr. de la Renta has created a watercolor iris-pattern dress that matches one Sophie wears, and, for $835 a night, the room includes autographed copies of Ms. Florio Kasouf's books, a Lulu Frost cameo necklace and charm suite, a loaner iPad Mini to follow Sophie's Virtual Tour of her favorite NYC spots and, of course, a visit to the Oscar de la Renta Madison Avenue boutique for a fitting. ... For anyone lamenting no longer being in the 2Y to 14Y demographic, this week the very busy Mr. de la Renta also released his Oscar de la Renta for the Outnet capsule collection of 23 styles referencing classic silhouettes and fabrics from his archives, like a twirl-ready nip-waist floral dress ($995).